IDLEWILD

Idlewild Union is proud to continue the tradition of creating the Golden Space Needle Awards in support of SIFF and its remarkable cultural impact on our community.

IDLEWILDUNION.COM

a curated journey transporting you to independent and international films that need to be seen.

Films inspire us, invigorate us, and buoy us while we struggle with the heightened emotions and uncertainty of our time. At SIFF, you don't have to face these challenges alone. The Festival is designed to not only connect us with films but also with one another. Each year during the Festival, the two of us find ourselves taking a step back to appreciate how each screening spurs new connections among the film lovers in the audience. These connections and the stories told on screen help us to understand each other's adversities and joys, which is crucial with the world so divided.

The 51st Seattle International Film Festival will again be a hybrid experience, with in-person screenings of all films at venues around the Seattle area May 15-25 and select streaming encore screenings May 26-June 1.

A society without an arts landscape rich in beauty, diversity, and critical thought is a society that leaves little room for personal and collective flourishing. SIFF is dedicated to the creation of vibrant experiences and spaces that champion film discovery and arts education so that we can all continue to grow as individuals, neighbors, and global citizens. Thank you for being here, and we thoroughly hope that you'll enjoy your trip.

FOUR MOTHERS

Edward, a struggling Irish author, is on the verge of literary success when his queer romance YA novel gains massive buzz ahead of its US release. His agent and publisher keep pushing him to take advantage of the moment and commit to a major book tour paired with extensive media appearances, all but guaranteeing a bestseller. However, as the sole caregiver to Alma—his endearingly feisty mother whose recent stroke has left her disabled and unable to speak except through an iPad—he feels conflicted about leaving her, even if only for two weeks. A prospective plan to get one of his best mates to care for her backfires when all three, taking inspiration from his idea, abruptly take off for the pride festival on sun-drenched Gran Canaria, leaving their own mothers behind in his charge. Over the chaotic weekend that follows, people-pleaser Edward must juggle his burgeoning career plans with the care of four eccentric, combative, and wildly different ladies—none of whom really get along with any of the others. In his follow-up to A Date for Mad Mary (SIFF 2017), director Darren Thornton formulates a note-perfect comedy about the tender bonds between mothers and their sons, drawing upon delightfully deep reserves of wisdom, poignancy, and heartfelt humor.

SORRY, BABY

Spanning several nonlinear chapters in the life of a people-pleasing English professor, Eva Victor's wondrously delicate and wry debut feature is an incisive exploration of the ways that trauma ripples through a life and the slow ways it heals (and sometimes doesn't). Set in a small coastal New England college town, we first meet Agnes (Victor, "Billions") as her best friend Lydie (Naomi Ackie, Mickey 17) arrives for a long-overdue visit to the house they shared as graduate students. The weekend unfolds with revelations of exciting life developments and awkward dinners with former classmates. Always at the periphery of the tightly bonded friends' familiar shorthand, though, are hints of a painful violation that shattered Agnes' personal and academic life. Subsequent chapters reveal the whole story, with each candid vignette unfolding with a soft touch and gentle humor. Rather than depict the core incident in detail, Victor keeps the camera at a distance, focusing instead on the immediate effects of a betrayal and rocky road to recovery. Through each hop through time, we follow Agnes as she experiences the unexpectedly transformational powers of the cuddly creatures found along the way, be it dear friends, surprisingly sensitive sandwich vendors, an abandoned kitten, or a sweet neighbor played by Lucas Hedges.

SIFF & CFC PRESENT THE DARK CRYSTAL

Join SIFF and Cross-Faded Cinema for a one-time-only update to this fantasy cult classic, featuring a new soundtrack mixed live on two turntables by DJ Nicfit.

Following the success of his first two Muppet movies, Jim Henson sought to push his storytelling and puppeteering craft even further with his next film, a dark, weird fantasy tale that would be unlike anything before it. And while The Dark Crystal met with mixed critical reviews and modest box office success, it quickly became a cult classic for Gen X kids and those who followed in their wake. On a distant, blighted world, a powerful magic crystal cracked a thousand years ago, a single shard lost. Two new races appeared: the cruel Skeksis and the wise Mystics. The Mystics went into exile as the Skeksis seized control of the Crystal and its castle, corrupting the surrounding lands and cruelly eradicating the Gelfling peoples for fear of a prophecy: "When single shines the triple sun / What was sundered and undone / Shall be whole, the two made one / By Gelfling hand, or else by none." Now, as the great conjunction approaches, Jen, a young Gelfling rescued and hidden by the Mystics' leader, departs upon a quest to find the missing shard and heal the crystal. Featuring iconic creature designs by Henson and Brian Froud and such memorably strange characters as the Skeksis Chamberlain and one-eyed Aughra, The Dark Crystal remains a bold, singular vision and one of cinema's great fantasy films.

THE GLASS WEB IN 3-D

Murder, deceit, and betrayal burst forth from the screen in The Glass Web, one of only a few noirs filmed using the 3-D process. Kathleen Hughes, dubbed "Miss 3-D" by Universal, plays femme fatale Paula Ranier, described in the film's trailer as "Bad, Beautiful... and Bold as Sin!" Paula and her former lover, TV writer Don Newell (John Forsythe of "Dynasty" fame), both work on the popular true-crime show "Crime of the Week." Soured by his rejection, she blackmails him, threatening to reveal their affair to his wife unless he pays $2,500. However, before he can make good with the cash, she turns up murdered. His imprudent attempts to conceal their liaison makes him a prime suspect for homicide detective Mike Stevens. Meanwhile, the show's producer Dave Markson and its chief researcher Henry Hayes (Edward G. Robinson) reveals the next episode will recreate Paula's unsolved murder in an effort to expose the real killer. Having previously filmed It Came From Outer Space in 3-D, director Jack Arnold ingeniously uses the process to glorious effect, creating intricate layers of spatial integrity and depth within scenes instead of going for "at-the-camera" gags, though there are a few of those, too. Restored by the 3-D Film Archive from the original 35mm camera negative, The Glass Web is presented in 3-D on DCP courtesy of Universal Pictures.

SCARECROW IN A GARDEN OF CUCUMBERS

If you've ever sung along with Lou Reed's "Walk on the Wild Side," you've evoked the name of Holly Woodlawn. "Holly came from Miami, F-L-A / Hitch-hiked her way across the USA / Plucked her eyebrows along the way / Shaved her legs and then he was a she...." Woodlawn was one of, if not the first, trans women to appear on film, and a fixture of Andy Warhol's Factory, appearing in Paul Morrissey's Trash and Women in Revolt. In her third film, Scarecrow in a Garden of Cucumbers, Woodlawn takes the lead role of Eve Harrington—the first of the film's many name-drops to the larger-than-life heroines from Hollywood's Golden Age—who leaves her small Kansas hometown in hopes of achieving stardom as an actress in New York City. What follows is a collection of fantastical, bawdy, campy, and ludicrously delirious musical set pieces, including the song "In The Very Last Row" performed by Bette Midler. Never released on home video, this landmark film was feared lost until its 35mm negative was rediscovered when DuArt Film & Video closed their storage facility. Restored by the Academy Film Archive and presented in collaboration with the American Genre Film Archive, Scarecrow in a Garden of Cucumbers preserves a rare and key part of Woodlawn's legacy.

Here we are, entering our second half-century as an arts nonprofit in Seattle. As we look to SIFF's future, we know there is much to do: In keeping with our new strategic plan, we will be thinking about how to proceed in ways that sustain our efforts AND expand our reach. This is a difficult time for many arts nonprofits, and your support in continuing our mission is vital to our survival.

On behalf of my colleagues on the SIFF Board of Directors, a heartfelt thank you to our sponsors, filmmakers, our amazing staff, our wonderful volunteers, our faithful donors, our thousands of members, and our amazing audience (that's YOU).

Historically, when Americans have been under stress, we go to the movies—movie theaters provided affordable entertainment during the Depression and brought news, solace, and perspective during WWII. This remains true today—our viewing is enhanced by experiencing film on the big screen in a theater with others in our community (and even more so with chocolate popcorn). We hope you join us in going to the movies—whether that is to laugh, to establish connection, to empathize, to commiserate, to be inspired, or to learn.

We all benefit from the movies we see, and here at SIFF we truly cannot do it without you and your support. Please join us by going into the dark to see the light. See you at the movies!

With gratitude,

Diana E. Knauf

MEET THE Programmers AND THEIR Picks

SIFF is more than just an annual celebration of the world's greatest films—it's a community of passionate cinephiles who live and breathe cinema. Meet the programmers who spend the year watching, discussing, and curating the best for the Festival.

Film festival programmers have seen a lot of movies—but it's impossible to see everything! This year, we asked them: As cinephiles immersed in both contemporary and classic films, what's a classic you recently saw for the first time that completely surprised you? What about the experience reeled you in?

Here are their answers—plus their hand-picked recommendations for SIFF 2025, chosen for our discerning audiences.

BETH BARRETT
ARTISTIC DIRECTOR

Alan Rudolph's Breakfast of Champions. It is a gonzo film, with a depth of id-releasing chaos matched only by its comic probing into the psyche and flawed humanity of Bruce Willis' Dwayne Hoover. Panned and ignored on its release, it was terrifyingly prescient to our media oversaturated lives today.

COME SEE ME IN THE GOOD LIGHT: Deeply emotional film about poets Andrea Gibson and Megan Falley, and love, mortality, life, and how to fully embrace letting go. Luminous, thoughtful, heartbreaking, and uplifting all at the same time.

THE LIBRARIANS: Meet the courageous book lovers standing on the front lines of intellectual freedom and democracy. It has never been more important to keep access to libraries open, and books (and ideas) free to all.

COLOR BOOK: Beautifully shot, this simple story of a father taking his son to a baseball game ripples out into a grand statement about life in America.

FOUR MOTHERS (SIFF Opening Night) is a rollicking Irish intergenerational queer comedy, and SORRY, BABY (SIFF Closing Night) introduces us to a powerful new voice in Eva Victor.

40 ACRES: Taut dystopian thriller from Canadian director R.T. Thorne! Danielle Deadwyler and Michael Greyeyes have to protect their clan and ancestral lands from a roving militia of cannibals in a future that sees the world's crops failing and society broken down.

HEIGHTENED SCRUTINY: Incredibly timely and important doc about ACLU Attorney Chase Strangio's Supreme Court battle to overturn Tennessee's bigoted ban on gender-affirming care for trans youth. Sadly, it is more important every day.

ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR OF FESTIVAL PROGRAMMING

It has been years since I have watched a classic film that I hadn't already seen (curse of the job), but when I recently rewatched the ending scenes of Wings of Desire, I think that was the first time I noticed the ending dedication to "all the former angels"—directors Yasujiro Ozu, François Truffaut, and Andrei Tarkovsky. I thought that was a very nice touch.

DJ AHMET: Georgi M. Unkovski's debut feature is a charming coming-of-age story told with warmth, an infectious sense of humor, great ensemble acting performances—especially Arif Jakup as Ahmet—and an evocative, upbeat soundtrack.

CLOUD: Prolific Japanese director Kiyoshi Kurosawa returns in top form with an engrossing story of an amoral internet profiteer that subtly evolves into a broader satire of our current internet age, culminating in a simultaneously riveting—and slightly absurd—manhunt.

THE NEW YEAR THAT NEVER CAME: Bogdan Mureșanu's robust, darkly funny debut feature cleverly expands his award-winning 2018 short The Christmas Gift, expertly incorporating it in as one of six intertwining stories that unfold over two wintry days in Bucharest on the eve of the Romanian revolution, culminating in a truly symphonic finale.

SALSA LIVES: Weaving together a treasure trove of archival footage with iconic interviews and an irresistible soundtrack, director Juan Carvajal's infectious documentary immerses you so deeply in Salsa music's rich history that you may be transformed into a salsero or salsero by the end.

SEEDS: Shot in exquisite black and white over nine years, Brittany Shyne's lyrical, loving documentary immerses us in the daily lives and rhythms of multiple generations of a Georgia county's Black farming families as they struggle to preserve their way of life.

JUSTINE BARDA

SENIOR PROGRAMMER

In honor of the recent remake of Nosferatu, Lincoln Center did a series on vampire films. That is how I came to see The She-Butterfly, a Serbian folk horror film from 1973. Of all the vampire films I have seen, I don't think I had ever seen one from Eastern Europe, which is strange, since that is the vampire's native habitat—although apparently Radu Jude has one coming out this year!

THE NEW YEAR THAT NEVER CAME: A bravura first feature, an amazing final sequence set to Ravel's "Bolero," and a timely reminder that dictatorships don't last forever.

SOULEYMANE'S STORY: What really got me about this film is the genre structure—a thriller that ends as a small-scale, high-stakes drama mirrors the message about what it takes to elicit empathy.

COEXISTENCE, MY ASS!: The moral clarity and political urgency of the comedy of progressive Israeli stand-up Noam Shuster-Eliassi makes this a film that really meets the historical moment.

DJ AHMET: A charming, upbeat comedy with a great soundtrack from a country we rarely see on film. A delight!

DAN DOODY

Do The Conjuring films count? No? That's probs for the best. I recently checked out Preston Sturges' The Lady Eve from the SPL—one of the great screwball comedies. Barbara Stanwyck plays Jean Harrington, a cynical con artist who falls so in love with her mark, doofus-naïf Charles Pike (Henry Fonda), that, even when seeking revenge for being spurned, she can't help but steer their ship towards a happily-ever-after reconciliation.

BLUE ROAD: THE EDNA O'BRIEN STORY: Irish author Edna O'Brien lived a more exciting life than many literary characters. Through archival clips, diary entries, and extensive interviews conducted with the author during her final year, this film is a vibrant and engaging portrait of a trailblazing feminist.

CAT TOWN, USA: Meet Terry and Bruce Jenkins, stewards of Cats Cradle Foundation, a living community and hospice for senior cats. Expanded from the short film Cats Cradle (SIFF 2018), this heartwarming documentary is the cinematic equivalent of catnip for all animal lovers.

TIME TRAVEL IS DANGEROUS: London vintage shop owners Megan and Ruth use a time machine to plunder the past to swell their inventory, who cares if the fabric of time and space unravels...? I mean, I care but also, look at this authentic cowboy hat I found...

THE GLASS WEB in 3-D: '50s film noir presented in all the glory of 3-D?! On the SIFF Downtown big, big screen?! Why would you be anywhere else?

GOOD BOY: Who's a good boy? Indy, our canine star, is a very good boy and a great actor, too. A creepy haunted house tale comes with a brilliant twist: the entire film is presented from Indy's POV.

MEGAN LEONARD

Seven Samurai. No surprise this was a masterpiece. But wow, watching the 4K restoration at the Egyptian over the summer knocked my socks off. The production! The drama! The completely unencumbered and inspired performance by Toshiro Mifune and his eyebrows!

F*CKTOYS: The kinky romp of your wet dreams. Pee-pee enthusiasts get drenched. A sex worker's odyssey through Trastown by way of John Waters.

COLOR BOOK: A striking debut about a single father who's just trying to take his kid to the ballgame.

BLKNWS: TERMS & CONDITIONS: Seattle legend Kahlil Joseph makes his grand return to the city with his visual feast of a debut feature.

SPERMAGEDDON: Am I a teenage boy? Perhaps. But with character names like Simen, Cumilla, and Jizzmo, and an animated adventure that delivers completely on its title and premise...how could I not include this instantly quotable absurdity?

SHORTSFEST OPENING NIGHT / THE FEMININE URGE / HEAD TRIP SHORTS: Every shorts program is seriously stacked this year, so find one that matches your vibe and enjoy this year's crop from around the world.

HEBE TABACHNIK

Mexican director Guillermo del Toro's The Devil's Backbone (2001), a ghost story set toward the end of the Spanish Civil War in an isolated school for orphan boys, got me by surprise with its beautiful imaginary, sinister setting, and effective condemnation of the cruelty by the Franco regime. A haunting thought was planted in my mind: The devil always finds a way to creep back to life.

DEAF: Ángela, a Deaf woman, and Héctor, her hearing partner, are expecting their first child. They are a couple in love, full of the excitement and all the questions that first parents have. However, Ángela's pregnancy triggers fears about motherhood and how she will be able to raise her daughter in a world of sounds. Winner of the Audience Award at Berlinale Panorama 2025.

THE NATURE OF INVISIBLE THINGS: Gloria and Sofia, two 10-year-old girls, meet during the summer holidays while spending the days in a hospital. Gloria is accompanying her nurse mother and Sofia is visiting her grandmother with Alzheimer's. Their playful and delicate bond will help them navigate the fragility of life and the ever-transforming challenges of growing up.

FLAMINGOS: LIFE AFTER THE METEORITE: Finding the right partner, the right place, and the ideal time to create a family is the most decisive task in nature. Instinct, love, risk, and wisdom are intertwined in this unforgettable journey of the Caribbean Flamingo in its most delicate period of existence; a journey at once surprising, enthralling, and deeply inspiring.

I AM NEVENKA: Nevenka Fernández, a town's finance councilor, is relentlessly pursued by the mayor, a man used to always getting what he wants politically and personally. Nevenka decides to report him, turning her courageous fight into the first #MeToo case in Spain.

ANGELO ACERBI

PROGRAMMER

I recently rewatched on the big screen The Night of the Hunter, the first and only film as a director for Charles Laughton. The expressionist aesthetics, the intense yet dry acting by Robert Mitchum, and a young and weirdly sexy Shelley Winters are the highlights for me (not to forget Lillian Gish) for a film that never gets old and sets a high standard for the genre films to come.

SUMMER'S CAMERA: A delicate and sweet self-discovery tale about a young girl whose dad's photographs give her the way to unlock a family secret, and her own as well.

HEIGHTENED SCRUTINY: The unmissable story of the first transgender lawyer facing the US Supreme Court in defense of trans rights. Inspirational and necessary in these harsh times.

SONS: Hard-hitting drama about the dilemma between duty and revenge: a prison guard faces a powerful figure from her past. How can (or must) one contain personal hatred?

DIAMONDS: A feast for the eyes and the souls in this trip down memory lane into a costume atelier in Rome, run by two very different sisters and populated by many women and their stories. An Italian box office hit.

FOUR MOTHERS: A sincere and funnily touching portrait of aging and the gay sons (often the ones on duty) who have to look after their old mothers. Tender, weirdly funny, and very true to the core of the emotions it conveys.

SUJ'N CHON

PROGRAMMER

Last summer's Twisters release gave me the excuse to catch up with 1996's Twister. Even though I hadn't seen it before, I was surprised at how much of the film had seeped into pop culture over the years. It's time for a Jami Gertz comeback!

SLANTED: This feature debut, which follows a Chinese American teen undergoing a transformative racial surgery to become white and blonde—essentially the “perfect” prom queen candidate—could have easily veered into camp. Instead, it delivers a sharply written, funny satire that consistently hits its marks. The jury for this year's SXSW Narrative Feature competition agrees, awarding it the top honor.

MEETING WITH POL POT: This powerful historical drama by renowned filmmaker Rithy Panh follows three French journalists invited to interview Pol Pot during the early months of the Khmer Rouge takeover, when the atrocities in Cambodia were still hidden to the outside world. It unfolds like a horror film, slowly revealing the terrors lurking just beyond their view.

HAPPYEND: Like SIFF 2023's Plan 75, this film takes place in the near future. Set in a Japanese high school with a high percentage of immigrant students, it explores the rise of a Big Brother surveillance society and the use of technology for social control. It reminds me of how thin the line we tread between realistic science fiction and dystopian reality.

BETWEEN GOODBYES: I was deeply moved by this beautifully told story about Mieke, a gay Korean-Danish adoptee, and her birth family—and how hope, acceptance, and over a decade of patience helped them build their post-reunion family bonds. Many tissues were used.

COLOR BOOK: This is a simple yet beautifully told story, in black and white, about a grieving father and his son with Down syndrome spending a day trying to get to an Atlanta Braves game. Their mishaps highlight the fragility of their relationship and the depth of their shared loss of the boy's mother.

DEVELOPMENT AND PROGRAMMING COORDINATOR

COME SEE ME IN THE GOOD LIGHT: An incredible story about living and dying and supporting a loved one as they battle cancer.

BAR: A behind-the-scenes look at cocktail school. Tip your bartender!

SECRET FEST: I can't talk about Secret Fest.

GOOD BOY: Best performance of the year.

THE CHEF & THE DARUMA: Sushi chef Tojo and his influence on sushi in North America.

SHORTSFEST: The speed-dating of cinema. If you're not into the film you're watching, in 10 minutes you may meet your new love.

KIMBERLY DINEHART

I watched Army of Shadows for the first time last year as a part of American Cinematheque's Bleak Week. It was on my list because Roger Deakins mentioned it as one of his favorite movies in his podcast. The movie was so good that I decided to start learning French.

FESTIVAL PROGRAMMING COORDINATOR

THE BALCONETTES: Many films attempt and fail to balance comedic stylized wackiness with nuanced social commentary, but Noémie Merlant makes it look easy. She's incredible and I can't wait to see what she does next.

COLOR BOOK: Quite possibly the most stunning cinematography I've seen all year; don't miss your chance to watch it on the big screen. I bawled my eyes out!

BABY DOE: It's incredibly rare to find media under the true crime umbrella that is both compassionate and discerning. This film really opened my eyes, not only to the epidemic of young religious girls (allegedly) committing infanticide, but to the deep, damaging issues with true crime coverage in America.

SONS: Nobody does psychological thrillers like Scandinavians! It's impossible to look away from this masterfully crafted, thoroughly rattling prison drama.

RAPTURES: This film takes place nearly 100 years ago, but in its disturbing depiction of fanaticism and ill-advised idolatry, this film feels more timely than ever in 21st century America. If you're at all interested in cults, this is a must-see!

KASI GAARENSTROOM

CINEMA PROGRAM MANAGER

Last year at one of my favorite events in the city, SIFF's own Noir City, I was able to catch the screening of Le Trou (1960). A classic prison escape film, the ragtag team of criminals and the newbie. Do they risk letting him in on the plan or do they keep their secrets to themselves? One aspect about this film that absolutely floored me was the sound design: There is no true score to the film, only the monotonous ting ting ting of metal hitting concrete, ambient sounds of the prison outside of their cell, and the boys. This film made such an impact on me that I added it to my Letterboxd Top 4, which is saying a lot!! Long live Le Trou!

THE BALCONETTES: The dream team behind Portrait of a Lady on Fire, Noémie Merlant and Céline Sciamma, are back, baby! However, if you were hoping for something similar, I'm sorry, but you will not find sapphic yearning here. You will find bright colors, the vibrant south of France, three beautiful, nosy neighbors, and a little bit of murder! The Balconettes is silly, sweaty, and an all-around fun girly pop grizzly romp from second-time director Merlant. See it with your girlfriends!

NEW JACK FURY: The midnighter to end all midnighters. High energy, big violence, and maybe the most green screen I've ever witnessed. This high-octane love letter to the Blaxploitation films of the '80s is sure to keep your interest well into the wee hours of the morning. Don't watch if you hate fun.

SCARECROW IN A GARDEN OF CUCUMBERS: A beautiful restoration of the '70s queer cult classic Scarecrow in a Garden of Cucumbers has arrived from AGFA. One of the very first feature films to be built around a trans actor, with an all-star cast (including voice acting from Bette Midler and Lily Tomlin), this film is weird and wonderful and freaking rocks. It's incredible to see that things really have not changed; there always was, and always will be, queer folks making weird, punk, and important art. See one of the first on the big screen! Everyone say, "Thank you, AGFA!"

BY DESIGN: Praise the film gods! Juliette Lewis is weird again! And she craves to be a chair. Yes, a chair. A beautiful, perfect, perpetually admired chair—isn't that what we all want? To be admired and sought after? Amanda Kramer takes on these big questions with a pitch-perfect cast, big visual numbers, and lots of furniture.

MEGAN GARBAYO-LÓPEZ

EDUCATION MANAGER

Luis Buñuel's 1950 film Los Olvidados (The Young and the Damned) is a Mexican teen crime film with a surrealist twist on Italian neorealism. Seeing it on the big screen at the Uptown left me simultaneously raw and dazzled. The young protagonist Pedro is swept away in a perpetual cycle of poverty and violence that climaxes in a final scene that has been burned in my memory forever. Los Olvidados was added to UNESCO's "Memory of the World" Register in 2003 and has influenced many films, including another favorite of mine, City of God.

DROWNED LAND: Choctaw director and 4th World Media Lab Alum Colleen Thurston's directorial debut deftly weaves a narrative about the Kiamichi River to reckon with the past, present, and future of life in Southeastern Oklahoma, from the Trail of Tears to today.

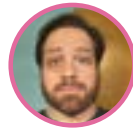

DANCING QUEEN IN HOLLYWOOD: If you were a fan of SIFF 2023's Golden Space Needle Best Picture winner Dancing Queen, you will love this sequel that brings our heroine Mina and her dance troupe to the bright lights of Hollywood for more teenage angst and shenanigans.

INTO THE WONDERWOODS: More than just kids fare, this love letter to the history of animation has something for viewers of all ages to enjoy. Recommended ages 7+ for scary moments and one swear word.

THE FAMILY PICTURE SHOW: This family-friendly shorts block features the latest from the studio that brought you The Book of Kells, a stop motion musical featuring a drag queen fox voiced by Sir Ian McKellen, and more fun to be had by kids of all ages.

FUTUREWAVE: TEENAGE HEARTS: As I say every year, I believe the children are our future. Let them blow your mind with their cinematic musings on love in all its forms, including romantic, familial, self, and dare I say...delusional?

MARCUS GORMAN

My favorite first watch from a couple years ago was Tony Richardson's A Taste of Honey (1961), which might be one of the most empathetically moving films I've ever seen and one of the few British New Wave movies that isn't all about men men men. Just more proof that movies about youth should, you know, involve youth in some creative capacity.

F*CKTOYS: True outsider art, as writer/director/star Annapurna Sriram treks through Trastown, USA in the hopes of lifting a curse. Don't Google this movie's title if you don't want weird results, unless maybe you do...?

SCARECROW IN A GARDEN OF CUCUMBERS: Trans actress and Warhol Factory icon Holly Woodlawn slays in this defiantly queer, newly restored 1972 camp cult classic about a small-town girl just trying to make it big in New York City.

BY DESIGN: The most confident film yet from absolute weirdo Amanda Kramer (Please Baby Please, Give Me Pity!), synthesizing her obsessions with kink, class, performance, and womanhood into this for-acquired-tastes-only deadpan satire about a woman who becomes a chair.

COLOR BOOK: A perfect fusion of indie cinema knowhow that will break you apart and put you back together. Winner of the Directors to Watch Award at the 2025 Palm Springs International Film Festival.

FAMILIAR TOUCH: Kathleen Chalfant—whose performances in the original stage casts of "Angels in America" and "Wit" are the stuff of legend—stuns in this wise, unshowy, Venice- and Independent Spirit Award-winning drama about aging with grace.

JESSE KNIGHT

I finally got to see The Rubber Gun, the long-unavailable 1977 debut feature from director Allan Moyle—whose spiritual trilogy of Empire Records, Times Square, and Pump Up the Volume was overwhelmingly formative for me as an angsty teen—and it exceeded expectations. Sort of Montreal's answer to Paul Morrissey and Andy Warhol, with a bit of Trainspotting and Christiane F. injection, I can't recommend the brand new restoration highly enough.

KATHLEEN MULLEN

I recently watched the 1940 film Dance, Girl, Dance by Dorothy Arzner. While I had seen clips before, I had never watched the full feature. One scene that stands out is when Judy, played by Maureen O'Hara, directly confronts the audience, challenging both them and us to reflect on ourselves. The world of women portrayed in the film, including Lucille Ball in a pivotal role, deeply moved me. What prompted me to revisit this film was a powerful documentary in SIFF's lineup, Know Her Name, which explores women directors and the phenomenon of historical amnesia.

SEEDS: Enter into the realities of Black farmers in the South. Meet their families, elders, and the people they work with to make ends meet when their livelihoods are on the line. I appreciated the observational insider's view by director Brittany Shyne of the fight for their rights and the daily joys they find as a community.

KNOW HER NAME: Uncover the stories of these visionary women in cinema and explore the effects of historical amnesia, revealing how sexism and racism have shaped the industry. Despite their groundbreaking work, many of these women directors, both past and present, remain absent from cinema's legacy!

JEAN COCTEAU: Jean Cocteau's writing, loves, and vision come to life in this unique exploration of the influential avant-garde French novelist, poet, filmmaker, and artist. Narrated by Josh O'Connor, this stunning work captures the essence of this artistic master's life.

DROWNED LAND: Colleen Thurston traces the history of how the Choctaw Nation's land has been gradually stripped away, intertwining it with her own family's fascinating story. As a new bill is signed to divert the Kiamichi River in Oklahoma, her family and the river's community become unexpected activists, fighting to protect their homes.

COME SEE ME IN THE GOOD LIGHT: Poet Andrea Gibson inspires me with their words and their courage for life in this timely documentary that chronicles the relationship between them and their poet spouse Megan Falley in the face of Andrea's incurable illness. A must-see.

COLLEEN O'HOLLERAN

I watched Michelangelo Antonioni's Blow-Up (1966) for the first time recently, about a photographer who inadvertently captures a murder on his camera. Watching Blow-Up feels like taking a time machine to the swinging sixties of Mod London. At the same time, it's strikingly poignant, exploring how humans reshape nature through devices, where the lines between reality and perception get progressively blurred.

CHAIN REACTIONS: The saw is family, y'all.

SPERMAGEDDON: You don't want to miss this Norwegian musical comedy, by the director of Violent Night and Dead Snow, about a sperm and their friends' adventures.

BY DESIGN: This movie riveted me—I could not look away... The throughline is fetish, and the actors understood the assignment.

THE BALCONETTES: Noémie Merlant's French horror comedy centers on friendship, sex, death, and revenge. It's also beautifully filmed and fun to watch.

GOOD BOY: And the Oscar® for best dog actor in a ghost story goes to...

PROGRAMMER

The film Manthan, a 2024 official Classic Selection at Cannes, is a film I rewatched after 40 years. A powerful film on deep-rooted social hierarchy based on generations of discrimination, exploitative middlemen, feudal landlords, and the peasants ends on a positive note with a sign of shift as the idea of the cooperative takes footing. While the film maintains its contemporary relevance, reflecting the persistent intersection of political dynamics with financial interests and power structures, it depicts how grassroots momentum can lead to equitable distribution of profits.

TRACY RECTOR

I've been on a late '80s and early '90s kick for the last six months à la Do the Right Thing or Stand By Me vibes. Maybe it's the nostalgia, sassiness, the really bad jokes, the less complicated times, or just the cheese factor that have been so satisfying and relatable.

TINĀ: Who doesn't love an inspiring, lighthearted tearjerker with a strong Samoan auntie leading the way with her excellent performance and some serious side-eye? A classic fish-out-of-water tale!

REMAINING NATIVE: First-time director Paige Bethmann heard about this remarkable teenager living in Nevada who chose to run 50 miles, in the footsteps of his grandfather, to honor his resilient spirit. She was so inspired by this young athlete and his family she decided to move from New York City to Reno and make this beautiful documentary.

MEDICINE CIRCLE: INDIGENOUS STORIES OF RETURN: In this year's Indigenous shorts package, we explore films born of the snowy landscapes of the northern territories and the Arctic Circle. We see stories of salmon, reindeer, student activism, and gender-shifting warriors come to life through the darkness into the light.

DROWNED LAND: 4th World Media Lab alumna Colleen Thurston set out seven years ago to share a story about the rights of water parallel with her connection to her peoples' history and tribal lands. Ultimately, her film became more than a fight for a river; it demonstrates a lifelong reckoning with the cycle of land theft and displacement that began with the Trail of Tears.

CORY RODRIGUEZ

I recently had the chance to see To Live and Die in L.A. for the first time, and on the big screen, too. I had always heard about William Friedkin's quintessentially '80s action thriller, but I wasn't expecting such amazing scenes like the wrong-way freeway chase, the perfect balance of William Petersen and Willem Dafoe, and the punctuation of such a gritty, crooked-looking city with the sounds of Wang Chung.

Not long ago, I saw Michael Curtiz's Passage to Marseille (1944) for the first time. It's got performances from Bogart and Claude Rains and the same bizarre wartime colonial French patriotism as Casablanca, but set in a much more brutal and violent frame. It was like Casablanca's less charming, less beautiful, less brilliant, more drunken and boisterous younger brother, who is for that reason somehow more relatable.

THE SAFE HOUSE: Lionel Baier has the gift of a light touch with serious material, and this film, with its nods to cultural touchstones of 1960s Paris, its jazz score, and its extremely stylish filmmaking, oozes charm while making a serious argument about history, memory, and movies.

RIEFENSTAHL: Didn't Mick Jagger say once that Triumph of the Will, by Hitler and Goebbels' house director, was his favorite movie? Here are all the reasons that's problematic, and also all the reasons it's plausible.

JOHN CRANKO: Have you wept at any ballet recently? It's your time. John Cranko is a sorely needed reminder that humans do occasionally make beautiful things.

HANAMI: The dry, rocky, sunny, breezy Atlantic nation of Cape Verde meets the mind of a child and a cinematic vision with a sense for magic. Gorgeous colors and textures: an ancient woman's face, the light from a flickering lantern. I can't wait to see this on the big screen.

MOON: Starts out with a punch to the face, literally, inside a women's MMA bout, then shifts to Jordan, where the fighter goes to train three wealthy, cloistered young women. As in Sonne (SIFF 2023), Ayub, a protégée of Austrian auteur Ulrich Seidl, gives an uppercut to Western ignorance of the reality of girls' lives in the Arab world.

EMALIE SODERBACK

I just recently found out that the writer of maybe my all-time favorite movie La Dolce Vita, Brunello Rondi, wrote and directed a woman obsessed/possessed film called Il Demonio (1963). Not only does the movie look absolutely gorgeous, but Dahlia Lavi's performance as a scorned woman who may or may not have the devil inside of her is horrifying and hypnotizing; it just has to be part of the blueprint for Adjani in Possession.

ANDY SPLETZER

Normally I watch new movies and don't revisit oldies, but last year I came down with a nasty case of COVID, so I fired up the library app Kanopy and watched Elaine May's Mikey and Nicky (1976), a gritty tale of low-rent gangsters (Peter Falk and John Cassavetes) on the run through the gritty streets of Philadelphia after Nicky stole some mob money. But it's also about complex male friendships, especially men at an older age, and that's great to see.

THE GLORIA OF YOUR IMAGINATION: Perhaps my favorite doc in the entire Festival, director Jennifer Reeves takes found footage of a single mom in 1963, filmed in three different therapy sessions, and creates a movie about gender inequality, consent, self-doubt, and honesty.

JEAN COCTEAU: This portrait of the influential poet/filmmaker/playwright/creative spirit is as informative as it is inspiring and will make you want to create art after you leave the theater.

SUBURBAN FURY: I love me an unreliable narrator, and this one is a mother of four who tried to assassinate President Ford. Sara Jane Moore tells her own story in this subjective documentary.

SANATORIUM UNDER THE SIGN OF THE HOURGLASS: After a 20-year drought, the Brothers Quay have made another feature film, and this mix of creepy puppet animation and surreal storytelling is worth the wait.

ALT SHORTS: DEAD RECKONING: This year, so many of the shorts have water and ocean themes, and the nautical term "dead reckoning" is in the opening of the movie My Dad Asked Me What Acid Felt Like, one of many fun experimental shorts in this year's program.

MAYUMI TSUTAKAWA

Although I saw them long ago, I recently rewatched two classics by Yasujiro Ozu: Late Spring and Tokyo Story. Although old-fashioned, the family relations are timeless and gently presented. The women actors are fabulous!

DARCY WYTKO

Kurosawa's High and Low! It feels so fresh and alive, even 60 years later. Unorthodox and innovative, it's just impossibly cool, plus its themes on class warfare are more relevant than ever. Can't wait to see Spike Lee's upcoming adaptation Highest 2 Lowest.

NICHOLE YOUNG

I'm only slightly embarrassed to admit I'm not one to watch the typical "classics" they taught in film school, although I will say I recently watched Before Sunrise (1995) for the first time and would easily categorize it as one. Before anyone says anything, I know I'm 30 years late to the hype! The yearning, the once-in-a-lifetime romance, the escapism, the tension, the tenderness, the heartbreak—what's not to adore?

INTRODUCING THE 4TH WORLD MEDIA LAB 2025 FELLOWS - COHORT 10

This year, we celebrate 10 years of the 4th World Media Lab, which provides Indigenous media creatives a progressive immersion into film learning and media exploration ranging from storytelling fundamentals and pitching to presentation and marketing to distribution and industry networking rooted in narrative sovereignty, collective care, and radical joy.

The year-long fellowship, founded by Pacific Northwest filmmaker Tracy Rector, includes residencies at Big Sky Documentary Film Festival, Camden International Film Festival, and Seattle International Film Festival. The Seattle experience, in partnership with global Indigenous organizations and industry experts, offers master classes, hands-on trainings, community gatherings, and global film presentations as part of the SIFF urban festival atmosphere.
